can be found, who will act as a break arginst any threatened tobogganing. It is proposed now to see that there shall be at least one or two companions in the whole regiment, so to speak, who will not vote for Elaine under any discumstances. The object of the plan is this: If Mr. Blaine will not take the momination unless it comes to him unanimously, the friends of the president propose that there shall be a number of delegates on hand to see has the unanimity is not forthcoming.

member of delegates on hand to see that the unanimity is not forthcoming.

No Beasen to Falter.

Home friends of the president have feared that in the last convention there were lid delegates who would not have voted for Blaine under any circumstances. They think they can conted just as many more this year, and they argue that if the opposition to Mr. Blaine puts on a determined and dimension front, and proves itself a manderable portion of the party. Mr. Maine can not with any self respect that they have no reason to falter in their confidence as to the outcome, and they insist with emphasis that Mr. Blaine will not be nominated. Other president will not be nominated. Other president in their confidence as to the convention are the being made by the president's france. It is expected that Mr. Harriman's name will be presented by some man of national prominence, as, for insince, Governor McKinley or Mr. Department of the purpose of making his candidacy national in its character. In the seconding speeches, of course, Indiana will come to the front. Ex. Secretary Thompson, who is still a fine talker despite his advanced age, and Ges. Lew Wallace may each be heard. This latter, by the way, is to be a delegate alternate that he is not to be present. It seems that he is not to be present. It seems that he is not to be present. It seems that before his district convention was held, he promised to use his influence to secure the selection of a local politician in his county. When the convention met, and during his absence, he was chosen one of the delegates by acclamation. He declined to serve, but it was then too late, as the convention had adjourned and another could not be called. Consequently he will be at Minneapolis. onvention had adjourned and another ould not be called. Consequently he nil be at Minneapolis.

scussing the Situation. Mr. Filley of St. Louis, one of the slegates at large from Missouri, has rived. He is here to take a look at its political situation. He takes pristely against the president, but he like publicly that he is hedging. He ye in fact: "I understand that there says in fact: "I understand that there has been some prominent hedging recently. It is singular what an enthus, natic and inviting tuing a political bend wagon is." Mr. Filley privately, however, appears to have fully identified himself with Gallinger, Washbam, Teller, Wolcott, Jones and Platt in deposition to the president. What Mr. Filley says is evidently the argument which will be presented at Minneagolis against the president's reaconination. In brief the charge is that Harrison's cannot be re-elected. The rallying cry, of the opposition to the president undoubtedly will be the charge that Harrison can not be re-elected. That is that all the delegates will hear at Minneapolis on their arrival. It is the plan by which Soward was defeated in Chicago in 1860. The purpose of the opposition is mid to be to have some man in every state delegation united in presenting this view of the situation as to the delegates from the other states. Filley has outlined the situation as to the latte of Wisconsin. One of the subined the situation as to the Visconsin. One of the sub-lich Chairman Clarkson has useing with other members of nal committee is the question

In the matter of the presence of federal effice-holdiers at the Minneapolis convention the understanding is that the friends of the president have decided that the office-holders who have been elected as delegates to the convention shall attend. It had at first been expected that Secretary Fofter and Secretary Elkins would both go to Minneapolis, but it is stated that now out of deference to the reported desires of the president that office-holders who are not delegates should not be present they will not go. To thus there will be seen exceptions. United States Martial Ransdell of this district, who is seen of the strong Indiana friends of the president will state the supersion in gaining ground very fast that there was much stronger feering for Harrison in the house than there had been for two peaks. He thinks that the impression is gaining ground very fast that Harrison will make an aggressive fight from the house than there had been for two peaks. He thinks that the impression is gaining ground very fast that Harrison will make an aggressive fight from the first ballot. He does not them that Mr. Biaine is doing anything for himself or that he will be recommended on the first ballot. He does not them that Mr. Biaine is doing anything for himself or that he will be a mandaled, and he regards the efforts of the opposition to Harrison as likely in be altogether fruitless.

A Great Meeting Place.

It is 500 feet long, 350 feet wide, and is located on Michigan avenue between Monroe and Madison streets. It will be a rather low, squatty structure, but very imposing, notwithstand-ing. It is being built wholly by the democrats of Chicago, and as an evidence of enterprise and party loyalty reflects much credit on the democracy of the great world's fair city. The building is a temporary struc-ture, but in no sense rude. It will be furnished and decorated as no conven-tion hall was ever furnished and decorat-od before. The delegates and alternates will be able to stretch their weary himbs from easy chairs finely uphol-stered, as good as can be found in any Chicago or New York theater, and will take their seats under a star-spangled canony more brilliant than the heavens. canopy more brilliant than the heavens, and every inch emblematic of the nation's loyalty.
